IS THE DOCTOR AWARE OF THE THREAT OF.....
...THE CYBERMEN?!!

Cybermen are back!

IT IS QUITE a week for monsters. Just a few days after the dreaded Cybermen returned to threaten Doctor Who, lots more of his weird foes from space will be storming the screens again.

From the deepest, darkest reaches of the Universe creatures like Krynoids, Son-tarans, Mandrells, Sea Devils and, of course, Daleks are making a comeback.

Not as part of the latest Doctor Who feature on BBC1 (Monday 6.55, Tuesday 7.5; Wales Monday and Wednesday 7.45) but as 'guests' of reporter Gavin Scott on Did You See...? (Saturday 6.45 BBC2).

'On the sci-fi horror scale, I'd give the Cybermen eight out of ten,' Gavin told me. 'And I remember being enthralled as a child when a Dalek was opened up and something slithery fell out! That must have been one of the best moments of television science-fiction.'

Gavin believes that successful monsters have to be both revolting and attractive.

'Some of those in the science-fiction films of the 1950s were really pathetic. They looked as though they were made from old cereal packets...'

Gavin thinks that modern ones are much more realistic, because our 'shock threshold' has gone up. In other words, we don't get scared as easily.

And, as he searched through past episodes of Doctor Who to pick the monsters for the programme, Gavin recalled the shows he saw at home when he was young: 'I admit that, like a lot of other Doctor Who fans, I watched some of those creatures with fingers over eyes, and there is nothing really wrong with that.'

6.15 pm A Second Chance to Learn

An Open Door programme made by members of the Second Chance to Learn Course.

'It was always a case of just make the best of it, you're a "B" stream pupil.'

There is a unique adult education experiment in Liverpool. Tonight its students, past and present, tell of their Second Chance to Learn - on a course that springs from their working-class life and interests.

Their report highlights the tragic waste of talent among people who feel that the education system has broken their confidence, people who've learned only to believe in their own failure. They show that this decline can be slammed into reverse, but only by giving many more A Second Chance to Learn.

6.45 Did You See...?

As the Cybermen return to Doctor Who, thriller writer and Newsnight reporter Gavin Scott celebrates 30 years of television monsters with guest appearances threatened by Daleks, Sea Devils, Mandrells, Yeti, Sontarans and Krynoids.

Sir Huw Wheldon presents his review of the week's television and discusses the Nine O'Clock News (BBC1), One Man and his Dog (BBC2) and the situation comedy series Shelley (Thames) with politics lecturer David Butler, sculptor Jonah Jones and novelist Susan Hill.

Death on 'Doctor Who'

It is positively infamous. For the first time since the foolish new times began, I manage to see the last episode of a Doctor Who adventure (16 March BBC1) – only to see one of his companions killed, which surely has never happened before. I wish to protest.

Richard Sturch
Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire

Fitting silence

. . . . Poor Adric, blown up by a Cyberman's home-made bomb attempting to save the dinosaurs from extinction. It was only fitting that the credits were rolled in silence and I, like many other loyal fans, mourn his passing.

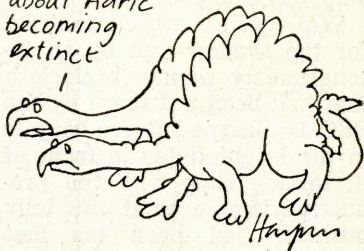

Simon Culhane
Twickenham, Middlesex

Irresponsible

Which irresponsible idiot had the idea of allowing the Cybermen in the 15 March episode of Doctor Who to walk about with plastic bags on their heads? Don't you realise how much children who watch these programmes like to copy them when the show is over?

Carol A. Davy
Sheffield

Dreadful about Adric becoming extinct

JOHN NATHAN-TURNER, Producer,
'Doctor Who', replies:

Adric was not the first companion to die in Doctor Who. Katarina (Adrienne Hill) died in December
1965 and Sara Kingdom (Jean Marsh) in 1966.

I accept Ms Davy's point about safety. Children should not play with plastic bags—or even unsealed plastic sheeting as was used in the Cyberman story Earthshock.
